DWR staff will present the current design and construction plans for the remediation of Perris
Dam and will be available to address concerns and answer questions from the audience.
Representatives from local agencies and local public officials will also be present to answer questions regarding impacts to the local communities.

In 2005, DWR identified potential seismic safety risks in a section of the foundation of Perris Dam. There is no imminent threat to life or property. However, in the interest of ensuring the maximum public safety for those using and living downstream of the lake, DWR has lowered the lake's water level. Repairs are estimated to begin in 2011 and dam completion is expected by 2013. All projects concerning the Perris Dam are anticipated to be complete by 2014.
